“The risk of an accidental war breaking out between Russia and the West is greater than at any time during the Cold War, Britain's most senior military officer has said in an interview with Times Radio” CNN Nov 14, 2021

In the U.S. much of our attention has had to focus on reversing the intensifying cold war with China. But with the U.S., NATO and Russia locked in new arms races and military confrontations in the Baltic and Black Seas and Central Europe, we need deeper understandings of these dynamics and where there are openings to defuse these dangerous confrontations.

Initiated by the Campaign for Peace, Disarmament and Common Security, Co-sponsored by the International Peace Bureau, Peace Action, Massachusetts Peace Action and the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament

Prof. Alexey Gromyko, Director of the Institute of Europe of the Russian Academy of Sciences; Chairman of Andrei Gromyko Association of Foreign Policy Studies; Member of the Research Council for the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Russia; Member of the Research Council at the Russian Security Council; Editor-in-Chief, journal “Contemporary Europe”; Executive Editor, journal “Social Sciences and Contemporary World.”

Kate Hudson, General Secretary of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament in the UK. She is a nationally and internationally renowned peace activist and has served as an officer of the Stop the War Coalition. A historian by profession, she was Head of Social and Policy Studies at London South Bank University and the author of CND Now More Than Ever: The Story of a Peace Movement.

Daryl G. Kimball, Executive Director of the Arms Control Association. He has written and spoken extensively on nuclear arms control, non-proliferation, and weapons production and is an editorial advisor and publisher for the monthly journal, Arms Control Today. He is recognized as a key individual whose ideas will help shape the policy debate on the future of nuclear weapons.
